

"A JOURNEY IN THEATRICAL SPACE" written by the art critic Natalia Borisova is now available.

It is the first Russian publication dedicated to the creative work of Anatoly Vasilyev and the conception of the theatre "School of Dramatic Art" that he founded in 1987 in Moscow, as well as the collaboration of the director with an architect and stage designer Igor Popov.

The work consists of two volumes: the first includes the article of N. Borisova and the full chronology of joint projects of A. Vasilyev and I. Popov. The text is combined with colour and black-and white illustrations.

The second volume, an album, contains more than 200 illustrations: photographs of performances, stage sets and rigs, stage plans, scale models, playbills. The book contains materials from both local and foreign archives of the most recognized theatre photographers of the world. Many of the photographs are published for the first time.

The design is worked out by the AES Group.

The book contains a complete parallel English translation of all Russian texts and is marked by outstanding printing quality.

The book is intended for both professionals and amateur theatre lovers, as well as the audience interested in visual arts.
